11 Annexure: Guidance Note - Frequently asked questions

11.1 Who can make a whistle-blowing report?

- i. Employees, management, directors of the Company and other stakeholders may make a Whistle-blowing report in terms of the Whistle-blowing Policy.
- ii. Concerns and reports must be raised in good faith, not in a malicious way and not for personal gain. The whistle blower must reasonably believe that the information reported, and any allegations contained in the Whistle-blowing report, are substantially true.

11.2 When to make a report or disclosure?

- i. Whistle blowers are encouraged to raise and report concerns at the earliest possible stage.

11.3 What can be reported using the Whistle-blowing Policy?

- i. You can report any suspected, attempted or actual wrongdoing in the workplace. This may involve your employer or an employee of the Company.
- ii. Using the Whistle-blowing process, you can report valid concerns including but not limited to:
 - Employer or employee behaviour which is not in line with or inconsistent with the Company's values, its code of ethics, and/or its policies and procedures.
 - Unethical behaviour;
 - Criminal behaviour;
 - Failure to comply with the law;
 - Injustice;
 - Danger to the health and safety of an individual;
 - Damage to the environment;
 - Unfair discrimination;
 - Abuse of Company or client resources or assets;
 - Deliberately hiding information about any of the above.

11.4 Making a choice between "anonymous" Whistle-blowing or providing your identity

- i. As a Whistle-blower, you must make a choice between making an "anonymous" Whistle-blowing report and revealing your identity.

11.5 What is anonymous whistle-blowing?

- i. As a Whistle-blower, you may choose not to reveal your identity.
- ii. The Company has established a Whistle-blowing line, which employees may use to report concerns in the workplace. The Whistle-blowing line is managed by KPMG, an independent third party big four audit firm. The systems of KPMG are set up in such a way that electronic reporting is non-traceable through devices such as caller ID. KPMG is not permitted to give away the identity of an anonymous caller to the Company, even if they do become aware of the caller's identity.

11.6 How can I help with an investigation, and still remain anonymous?

- i. If the call is made anonymously, it limits the ability of the Investigator to obtain further information relating to the allegation and makes it difficult to clarify the concerns raised. Where there is insufficient information provided, and the Investigator is unsure of the concerns, some cases need to be closed.
- ii. To assist in investigations, where you still wish to remain anonymous, you should always call the Whistle-blowing line back after a few days. Investigators will often leave further questions that they need answered with the KPMG Whistle-blowing line staff. You will be able to assist in the investigation further by answering the questions, and still remain anonymous.
- iii. If the Whistle-blowing report is made anonymously, the Company will not be able to protect the Whistle-blower from victimisation or suffering prejudice for the simple reason that the Company cannot protect an unidentified or "faceless" person.

11.7 What protection do I have if I reveal my identity?

- i. As a Whistle-blower you may choose to provide your identity when making a Whistle-blowing report. If you provide your identity, the Company will respect and protect your identity, and confirms that it will not reveal your identity. The only exception to this, is if the Company is obliged to reveal confidential information relating to you as a Whistle-blower by law, but the Company will always inform you, before it reveals your identity.
- ii. The Company will protect an employee who makes a Whistle-blowing report, from being victimised or suffering prejudice in the workplace, if the identity of the Whistle-blower is made available.

11.8 Is my report confidential?

- i. Whether you decide to make an anonymous Whistle-blowing report or you decide to provide your identity, your Whistle-blowing report, will always be treated confidentially. The Company wishes to assure the safety of Whistle-blowers and therefore undertakes to treat all Whistle-blowing reports as confidential. An exception to this is where the Company is obliged to reveal confidential information relating to the Whistle-blowing report, by law, or where it is necessary to progress and investigation.
- ii. Importantly, the Company's undertaking of confidentiality over the Whistle-blowing report can only be completely effective if the Whistle-blower also maintains confidentiality.

11.9 How to raise a Whistle-blowing complaint?

- i. You may make the Whistle-blowing report by using the internal, external or other Whistle-blowing channels in the Whistle-blowing Policy.
- ii. You may make a Whistle-blowing report by providing your identity or an anonymous Whistleblowing report.

- iii. You should provide as much information as soon as possible, such as names, dates, places, and references and as much supporting documentary evidence as possible, when making your Whistle-blowing report.
- iv. If you make your report through any of the internal Whistle-blowing channels, including the KPMG Whistle-blowing line, your report will be routed to the Policy Owner, for investigation and/or appropriate action.

11.10 Internal reporting through the KPMG Whistle-blowing line

- i. You may contact the KPMG Whistle-blowing line to make a Whistleblowing report. You may make a confidential report or remain anonymous when making your report.
- ii. If you make an anonymous report to the KPMG Whistleblowing line, you are still encouraged to leave your name and contact details with KPMG, so that KPMG can contact you regarding the investigation and so that feedback can be given. KPMG will keep your name and contact details confidential.
- iii. An operator will answer your call and record the details of the concern you wish to report. During this conversation the operator will request as much information as possible to ensure that the investigators have enough information to investigate the report.
- iv. Operators of the Whistle-blowing line will submit a report to the Policy Owner who is responsible for receiving and actioning all reports made internally. If you made an anonymous report but left your name and contact details with KPMG, they will not provide your name and contact details to the Policy Owner.
- v. Callers may re-contact the Whistle-blowing line to request a feedback report from the investigation team and the investigation team may request further information from the caller by leaving their request for information with the Whistle-blowing line operator.

11.11 How to decide if it is reasonable to make a Whistle-blowing report?

- i. When deciding if making the Whistle-blowing report is reasonable, you should consider the following:
 - The seriousness of the behaviour complained of.
 - Whether the behaviour complained of is continuing or likely to occur in the future.
 - Whether the Whistle-blowing report is in breach of a duty of confidentiality of the Company towards any other person.
 - Whether you as the Whistle-blower have complied with the procedure set out by the Company in making the Whistle-blowing report or disclosure.
 - Whether the employer may have taken action already as a result of a previous Whistle-blowing report or disclosure made.
 - The interests of the public.

11.12 False or malicious Whistle-blowing reports

- i. Any person making a Whistle-blowing report must not make allegations which are false or make a report in bad faith or maliciously.

- ii. The Company is not obliged to protect any employee from prejudice in the workplace, who makes a Whistle-blowing report, knowing that the information provided is untrue. In these cases, disciplinary action may be taken against the person concerned.

11.13 What to do if you suffer victimisation or prejudice for making a protected Whistle-blowing report?

- i. If an employee suffers victimisation or prejudice for making a protected Whistle-blowing report, the employee may:
 - follow the normal grievance procedure to address the issue.
 - be transferred, at his/her request, to another post or position in the same division or another division of the Company, if reasonably possible and practical. The terms and conditions of employment for the transfer may not be less favourable than before the transfer, without the Employee's consent. Reasonable grounds for transfer will be determined, taking into account the circumstances and merits of each request.
 - approach any court having jurisdiction, or follow any other process allowed by law.

11.14 Disciplinary enquiries following Whistle-blowing reports

- i. After an investigation, if it is recommended that a disciplinary enquiry will be necessary; the disciplinary enquiry will be initiated by the investigation team.
- ii. The investigation team will represent the Company (as its appointed representative) and is responsible for amongst other matters:
 - Formulating and agreeing charges, together with Employee Relations and Human Capital;
 - Selecting and presenting witnesses at the disciplinary enquiry;
 - Leading and presenting evidence at the enquiry; and
 - Presenting argument relating to an appropriate sanction.

11.15 Will the person be treated differently when raising a concern?

- i. If you have raised a suspicion or concern in good faith, the answer is "no".

11.16 What if the person making the Whistle-blowing report is not entirely sure of the facts, but is only suspicious?

- i. It is important for employees to raise any reasonable suspicion that they may have, of wrongdoing in the workplace, so that this can be looked into, provided that the Whistle-blowing report is made in good faith.

11.17 What about a personal work-related complaint or concern?

- i. If you have a personal complaint or a concern that affects you as an individual, e.g. harassment, this should be raised using the Group Human Capital policies. Advice is available from your Business Unit Human Capital representative.

11.18 Will the person raising a concern get into trouble?

- i. If an employee has raised his/her concerns as is set out in the Whistle-blowing Policy or this Guidance Note, the employee will not be considered a troublemaker nor a disloyal employee for raising these concerns. If an employee is himself or herself involved in the wrongdoing, the Company will try to ensure that the employee does not suffer prejudice from other colleagues for having spoken out. However, the employee who was involved in the wrongdoing would still have to answer for his or her actions and could not expect immunity from disciplinary or criminal proceedings. The fact that the employee disclosed his or her involvement in any wrongdoing, would likely be taken into account.

11.19 What if the concerns involve a client of the Company?

- i. Clients are owed a duty of confidentiality under the Company policies and applicable regulations. It is important to respect this. If an employee genuinely believes that a client is involved in any wrongdoing, the employee must bring this matter to the attention of his or her line manager or risk Manager. This will ensure that the Company can deal with the matter lawfully and correctly.
